H.M. Queen Margrethe II

Golden Jubilee

Join us in celebrating the Queen's Golden Jubilee

On 14 January, Her Majesty celebrates 50 years as Regent of the Realm. This is being marked by a minisheet with three stamps: one showing the official portrait of the Queen at her coronation in 1972, one with the Royal Coat of Arms established by Royal Resolution in July 1972, and finally a brand new portrait.

Astronomical achievements

The Niels Bohr Institute at the University of Copenhagen is the initiator of Videnskabsår22 (part of the International Year of Basic Science and Development), which aims to increase the focus on the importance of science among the general public.

And Denmark has much to contribute – for example, great achievements in astronomy and space, which are highlighted in the new Astronomy stamp series.

Danish contributions in astronomy and space

Stella Nova 1572

Tycho Brahe sees the remains of the exploding star Stella Nova and learns that the sky is changeable and not static.

The hesitation of light 1676

Ole Rømer studies Jupiter's moons through a telescope and discovers that light has a constant speed.

Danish astrometry

The mapping of stars' movements and distances has contributed to the development of technologies such as satellites and space telescopes.

Send a proverb

Set phrases that concisely summarise experiences or rules to live by, often drawing on vivid imagery

Because proverbs are concise and generally feature some kind of rhythm or rhyme, they are relatively simple to remember.. We have gathered five danish proverbs, easily to put on your letters. And maybe you even know some of them?

First day cover
281217 DKK 80.00.

Strip with 10 stamps
281213 DKK 120.00

First Dane in space 2015
Andreas Mogensen is the first Dane in space when he takes part in a 10-day mission for the European Space Agency. One of his tasks is to photograph massive lightning strikes.

Mars 2020 mission
NASA is behind the mission to search for life on Mars, with one of the Danish contributions being the camera for the Mars vehicle Perseverance Rover, developed by DTU Space.

Congratulations on your jubilee
